FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

President Hoover has proclaimed the week of October 4 for observation as "Fire Prevention" week and solicits "the assistance of each citizen to lessen the loss, needless waste and suffering from fires largely preventable."That there is need alike for individual and collective safeguarding against fire loss is made evident by his citation of the fact that last year fires were responsible for a direct property loss of nearly $500,- 000,000, an increase of approximately $40,000,000 over the year before, while deaths and injuries exceeded 35,000.Carelessness was in large part responsible for this awful fire toll exacted from the country, but much of it was due to ignorance.Fire Chief Vincent L. Malloy joins with officials of other American cities in asking that the observance of "fire prevention" week be stressed. Inspections will be made by Malloy's department of downtown store buildings, the industrial district, schools and precautions taken to eliminate as many as possible of the fire hazards that may be prevalent here.Malloy asks Salem residents to make their efforts to prevent fires a year-round effort. Fire prevention week is held merely in order to impress on the American public the great losses in lives and property resulting from conflagrations.
Salem too, has been hit by fires.
Perhaps no lives have been lost, but the precautions must be continued.Protect your home, your children, your neighbor, by weekly inspections towards elimination of hazards.

COMMUNISTIC ARISTOCRACY

Bolshevik rulers are little different from all the other rulers in history, we learn from Charles Malamuth, writer, who has just returned from the red Republic where his job as translator of late Russian novels into English gave him access to the inner circle of the Soviet "aristocracy."Stalin and some of the other zealots live in strict simplicity but the high officials who are merely job holders are surrounded by "Barnard splendor." Mr. Malamuth reports in telling of banquets served on royal ware with butlers behind each chair, pheasants served in style a potentate might envy and the world's finest wines flowing freely.They excuse this departure from the Communistic code on the ground that they must give distinguished foreigners the style of living to which they have been accustomed but in beating the bourgeoisie at its own game these Russian beaurocrats are merely following in the footsteps of the rulers of all time.There is no protest from the working classes for two reasons. In the first place they do not know what is going on in the old palaces which have been turned into headquarters for their leaders and secondly their own lot is infinitely better than anything they have ever known. Mr. Malamuth says.
They work 14 to 16 hours a day, live in the 10 square feet of apartment space allotted to each member of the working class and buy such food as their cards will permit yet all of this is an improvement over their condition of life under the czar.Russia today has many of the evils of the worst "Capitalistic" government combined with the shortcomings of the Communistic system, this observer reports, yet revolt is out of the question. The lower working classes are pleased with their newly acquired status of equality, the intellectuals and professional men are disillusioned andtoo tired to protest and, more important than either, anyone who whispers of revolution is hustled off to prison or shot.Another observer, Colonel Clarence T. Starr, recently returned from a long stay in Russia discloses that the Communist party which holds absolute domination, numbers only 1,600,000 members or less than one per cent of the entire population of Russia. Its control is complete, however, because every place of authority is held by a royal Communist. It is not so important to the Russian that heads of government are all high in the ruling party. Of much more effect is the fact that the foreman under whom he works is a Communist with autocratic power to revoke the food card without which he cannot buy his dried herring and black bread, to turn him out of the sleeping quarters to which his labor entitles him and to ship him off in his cotton trousers and blouse to a Siberian lumber camp with the mercury below zero.This amazingly complete governmental machinery makes the Communist party's rule absolute over the other 99 per cent of Russia's Millions, still dazzled by their newfound freedom and stops murmurs if they chance to learn that their leaders talk the equality of absolute socialism yet sit in grandeur at the tables of kings.

What Others Say

ICEBERGS SIDETRACKED

The usual crop of floating glacier fragments was produced this year in the Arctic regions and the icebergs were carried toward the North Atlantic ship lanes as usual.
But an east wind intervened and floated most of them to safe harbor along the coast of Labrador.
There, it is reasonable to believe, they will remain until they disintegrate unless some future and unusual western gale turns them back and they join newer crops of icebergs that float down to harass ships that sail the North Atlantic.This situation is revealed by the return of the coast patrol boat, General Green, which got back to Boston last week after a cruise of investigation along the coasts of Labrador and Greenland. The expedition set out for the North on July 4, following a spring during which water frequently by transatlantic shipping were free of icebergs than in any season since the international ice patrol was instituted, after the crash of the steamship Titanic on an iceberg in 1912, with a loss of 1,517 lives. A great deal of speculation attended the unusual spring season and the expedition was organized to learn what may have happened to the crop of icebergs.Early announcements by members of the expedition hold out no hope that the east winds will continue in seasons to come and thus ward off the introduction of dangerous ice into the waters of the North Atlantic. However the expedition returned with a wealth of new information relating to currents and water temperatures and patrol in years to come. The data the work of the international ice study will no-doubt be of value in ocean depths whose assembly and collected is in the hands of Olay Mosby, Norwegian scientist and oceanographer, a member of the expedition, who will compile them for practical use.That the Gulf stream has widened out in its northerly country, bringing its warmth to new localities, is reported by other observers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When Thousands Rallied Against Crime

New York citizens, smarting under the wanton killing of two babes by gangland gunplay within a month of each other, joined in a huge rally, 20,000 strong, at Madison Square Garden, against the underworld, which has taken such a toll in human lives, and resolved to smash its menace. Among the speakers who exhorted the throngs to drive gangs from their stronghold were Gen. Smedley Butler, of the Marine Corps (left); Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State (center insert); and Edward Mulrooney, Police Commissioner of New York.NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Diary of a modern Pepsy: Up to ride in my new bunsen buggy to Van Cortlandt park, which a sea captain told me he found the coolest spot in New York and it was true. And back down Broadway, seeing John Weissmuller, the swimmer, and his bride, Bobbie Arnet, window shopping along.In the afternoon Henry Sell came and gave the most engaging account I ever heard of Russia and his wanderings there with Gene and Polly Tunney. In especial how loud speakers on street corners hurled the masses to work and the intense, and to me, fanatic fervor over the five year plan.To dinner at the Atlantic Beach club and among others there were the Jerome Napoleon Bonaparts, Ralph Blomer, one time football star, Walter Chrysler, Jr., Grover Whalen and a tanned black lady in filmy lace pajamas. So home in the starlight singing songs of yesteryear.Someone calls it "The Museum of Natural Mystery." Thousands of New Yorkers pass by every day but few know the origin. It is a modernistic red tower on Riverside Drive at 103rd street and the official name is The Roerich—a sort of "one man museum" built by a Russian named Nicholas K. Roerich about whom little is known.I am told 1,000 paintings in the museum are by Mr. Roerich, chiefly canvases of an allegorical nature. He has also published books—some of which are given away. A section is given over to esoteric literature of the Far East, each volume cached in especial holy cloth.
Some days there are only about a dozen visitors and other times it is well filled. There is a graceful cordiality that makes everyone feel instantly welcome and yet there is something about it that seems eerie—like a Rhine castle of legendary myths.A gentleman in my apartment building is an enthusiastic reader of Gertrude Stein. He believes she is a gifted, misunderstood novelist.
Last evening he turned down a page for me to read and digest slowly. It began: "In, in beginning, in beginning, I begin to be confused and carefully collected—if I agree, you agree, we agree." I will agree only to one thing—one of us is nuts.

Watch Your Step, Mr. Mellon

Coming through a hatchway of the S. S. Biancamano to board a rather unsteady Government boat bobbing alongside the liner in New York bay, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon had better watch his step to avoid a disastrous plunge into the turbulent sea. The Secretary returned after participating in the international debt parleys at Paris.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland, New York CityWorry Linked With Ill Health To be afraid of a nervous breakdown is not at all uncommon. Many a person visits the doctor for help, admitting the only thing the matter is this particular fear.It seems strange that one should go to a doctor not to find what is wrong but to tell him the nature of the ailment. However, that is actually what happens.
Good health is a condition in which we enjoy ourselves most. This desirable state can exist only when we give the body the necessary care and rest. But, it is not enough to regard the physical aspects alone; it is equally as important to pay attention to the mental health.It is impossible to rest if the mind is disturbed, worried or otherwise upset. Such a mental state is easily brought about by physical fatigue.
It is true, too, that worry, undue excitement, nervous apprehension and fear are capable of producing definite damage to the body.If you are working very hard, make sure you are getting the necessary sleep, at least seven or eight hours daily. Hard work creates the demand for food, both palatable and easily digested. The diet should contain an abundance of fresh vegetables, fruits, milk, cream and butter. Get out of doors, and, above all, get into the sun.If you have not been working and are worried because of the present state of affairs, try to be philosophical about it. No matterwhat may be your financial state, it is just as important as ever to maintain your bodily health.
Worry will not help to get a new job. A long siege of worry won't help to hold a new job. Worrying lowers the vitality and will render you less able to undertake new duties as you should.If you do not feel up to par, if you are easily irritated or apprehensive, if your mind is full of fear, consult with your physician.
In all probability he will suggest rest and, if need be, prescribe the necessary tonic.Answers to Health Queries

SYNOPSIS

Sally Rutherford the last of a proud old southern family, following the ruin and suicide of her grandfather, determines to keep the heavily mortgaged Oakleigh plantation for her grandmother. She opens a hot dog stand on the highway. The estate of the Winsteads, of carpetbagging stock, adorns Oakleigh. Henry Winstead, the old Oakleigh mortgagee. His only son, Sam, is a great help to Sally, although she doesn't know his real identity until the stand is successfully started. Sally falls in love with Lowndes Jennings and elopes herself to his promised wife. Sam forces Lowndes to admit, in front of Sally, that he is engaged to the wealthy Gertrude Leinert. Sam asks Sally to marry him, although he knows she does not love him. Sally decides to accept love him. They are married and Sam gives Oakleigh back to Sally as a wedding present.

THE COLONEL COMES TOO LATE

"Sam," said Sally in a whisper. "Tell me, do you hate me? Do you think I have—injured you?" He regarded her with clear, round eyes. He even smiled. "No Sally, I most certainly do not hate you," he told her truthfully. "And you have not injured me. I fell in love with you. I married you with my eyes wide open, knowing exactly what I did and why I did it. You married me to save Oakleigh and for your grandmother's sake, among other reasons. Very well, I give you Oakleigh, a free gift. And you need never again worry about Mrs. Rutherford, dear old lady! So that's that. But I will not take for my life any woman who does not love me as much as I love her. I will have no captive, no sacrifice. I will have as much as I give or I will have nothing. Do you understand?"

"Yes," said she, understanding a —and closed her eyes with gentle fingers.

soul. I shouldn't have married you if I had not been sure of that." "What do you want me to do?" said she after a pause. "We shall have a part to play, for a while at least, in the eyes of the world. Can you play the happy bride?"

"I can try to," said she faintly. "Do so. Be Mrs. Sam Winstead. You won't find people sorry for young Mrs. Sam Winstead. You've got to stay here at Oakleigh on account of your grandmother. I quiet understand your not wishing to leave her even for a day. I shall necessarily be away from the house a great deal—the milkman can't loaf, you know! So you won't have to see too much of me. You'll keep up your end of the game. I'll keep up mine. To everybody we shall appear the happiest of newlyweds. I shall never have but one command: You've got to behave decently to my father."

"You have been so kind and so generous that I—I promise not to make you think me a fool," she told him.

He bowed. "That is all, I think. You need have no fear. I'll encroach, Sally. I've done all the lovingmaking I shall ever do, my dear. If there's any more to be done you'll have to do it yourself. You'll have to seek me, I swear it. There—that should set your mind at peace!"

She held out her hand with his ring on it. Would he take it? But he was not petty. He did take her hand and his grip was warm and reassuring.

"Sam," she said in a hushed voice, "I am sorry, I am sorry! I wish—things could be different—you deserve so much better! And thank you. You have given me a certain peace of mind." She added after a moment's thought: "I think I am beginning to know the Winsteads, really. They are worth knowing, though I—I am a little afraid of them. But I hope you believe me when I say that—that I am not very sorry I—I'm one of them."

He kissed her fingers by way of reply. "We shall be the best and truest of pals, dear girl. Now goodnight, Sally, sleep well. Show me a rosier face in the morning!" He went out.

He had arranged a small dressing room for himself further down the hall and here he spent his wedding night. It had been a strenuous day for him and he felt very tired. His buoyancy departed, even his pride deserted him, and he felt old, old. For man can be only as young as his hope; he must ever be as old as his sorrow. Sam knew something akin to despair. Had he done well to marry the last Rutherford? And face all the future as he must face tomorrow morning, knowing that he held but the empty shell of happiness? He lay awake with his head in his arms, for a long time. Then, because after all he was young and healthy, he fell asleep.

Later he was awakened by a sharp call. Sally was standing just inside his door. A gay kioko was thrown over her nightdress.

"Please come. There's something the matter with grandmama!" she cried, her voice shaking with terror. "I heard her call . . . I wasn't asleep . . . and I ran to her . . . and there's something wrong . . . and I was frightened and ran for you. Hurry, hurry!"

Mrs. Rutherford was gently putting Sally aside when he entered her room. The frightened girl had turned on all the lights and the slender old lady was sitting up in her bed, two vivid pink spots in her cheeks and her eyes large and black with excitement. Her fluffy white hair was like a nimbus around her face. When Sam reached her bedside she looked at him a moment, then laughed softly.

"Ashley! Dear boy, I'm so glad you're here!" she cried. "Your father's home. I knew he'd come before morning! I heard the sound of wheels and then his voice. Rupert's home, Rupert's home! There, Ashley, don't you hear his step on the stairs?" She bent her head as if she listened. "Now he's at the door," she said happily. "Rupert! Rupert!"

"O, grandmama! Grandmama!" Sally gave a wailing cry, but Sarah Rutherford never heard it. Her eyes strained toward the door.

"Rupert!" she cried rapturously. "You've come. You're a little ahead of time, Rupert." She held out her arms. "I—I had something to tell you—Ashley, hold me up; don't you see your father's here? Rupert—" She raised her face as if for a welcoming kiss. And then her arms fell slack, her slight old body bent itself forward, Sam Winstead laid her back on her pillows and closed her eyes with gentle fingers. The colonel had come home to the wife of his youth.

Sally gave a gasping cry and pitched forward. Sam caught her as she slid down sideways and bore her to her own room, ministering to her duty. Her dark head lay supine against his breast, and as he placed her on her own bed he held her tighter for a moment and his kiss fell upon her forehead. The girl had been keyed up to the breaking point, and when she collapsed the swoon was so deep and prolonged that Sam was frightened. Before daylight, doctors and nurses as well as the undertaker and his assistants were on their way to Oakleigh, upon which tragedy had again descended.

While she was yet unconscious she was removed to Winstead's. She woke up one morning and stared around wondrously. She lay in a large and lovely room, with the May sunlight pouring in through long windows and the soft air sweet with scents of the garden just outside. She was conscious of the odor first, and lay sniffing it instinctively. The room was strange to her and she looked around with a growing curiosity and astonishment. Her room at Oakleigh had the beauty of old and ordered luxury. This room was quite as beautiful, but in an altogether different manner.

All her faculties were for the moment lost in a daze of wonder. She didn't know where she was or how she got here. The little gay wind ruffled the beautiful soft-toned curtains and danced over the bed, stirring her hair, flooding her with the thousand scents of a garden, and the friendly trees outside nodded to her as if in kindly greeting.

The door from another room opened and an efficient person all in starched white walked across the floor and stood beside her bed, smiling down at her. A trained nurse, who explained in a clear, modulated voice how pleased she was to see Mrs. Winstead awake and looking so much better.

Memory had been returning to Sally swiftly, like an intruding tidal wave. Lights, faces. A voice droning, "I pronounce you man and wife." A young man leaning white-faced against her bedroom door, the while he said bitter things. And she holding a sheaf of papers that gave her back Oakleigh. And grandmama was dead. She covered her eyes.

The starched nurse went to a door, opened it softly, and gave a low voiced order. Then she came back and smiled encouragingly. "I have sent Mr. Winstead word," she said cheerfully. "The butler is telephoning him. He will be right over."

"I can't remember how I got here," said Sally weakly. "I don't know where I am." "You are in your own room at Winstead's," the nurse told her. "You had a—sort of collapse at Oakleigh and the doctors thought you had better be brought here. You were unconscious when you came, and you've only been semi-conscious since. But now you're all right, except that you'll be a little weak for a couple of days yet. Your husband will be able to draw a free breath now—he hasn't done so for two weeks!"

"Two weeks!" gasped Sally. "Only two weeks," nodded the nurse. Sally couldn't speak. A flood of painful emotions swept over her. She had never been sick a day in her life, but now she lay spent. Her mind turned like a millwheel. Grandpapa—grandmama. Grandpapa had come for grandmama, but—she had come too late to save Sally.

There was a little stir at the door, which opened to admit a tall young man. His bright blue eyes met Sally's reassuringly. The nurse moved away with a cheerful, "She is quite all right now, Mr. Winstead, but she'll have to lie quiet for a few days more until she's stronger."

The nurse was looking at him with the admiration and respect which most women displayed for him, and he smiled back at her as he seated himself. His glance at Sally was not at all possessive. He lifted her hand to his lips and kissed her fingers.

BORERS' SPREAD ALARMS OHIOANS

Northwestern Section of State Hit Hard By Corn Disease

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 31. — The in the northwestern section of Ohio alarming spread of the corn borer said to be from four to nine times greater than during last year, today caused United States department of agriculture quarantine representatives to announce that farmers must inaugurate an intensive clean-up campaign to prevent further spread of the pest.

E. G. Brewer, government corn-borer expert, with headquarters here, reported that while the borer's activities have been lessened in the southern section, the infestation in the northwestern area is higher than at any time since 1927. He attributed the bad condition in the northwestern section to the fact that farmers, while enjoying a bumper crop, had failed to clean-up fodder and refuse from last year.

Brewer said his agents had noted new areas of infestation in Indiana. Sections hardest hit were affected but little by the drought he said.

ity, that this half starved, penniless man will be received with honor and respect not accorded to any rajah, glittering with jewels and enriched by millions that Britain rule helps him to extract from miserable natives.

PERHAPS YOU READ here a suggestion that mysterious rays able to penetrate our tissues, without destroying them, might prolong human life.

The learned Dr. Stokols, serious scientist and radium expert, tells the congress of radiologists in Paris that the rays may prolong human life indefinitely.

No calamity could be greater than making life last forever. Imagine a world peopled by 10 billion human beings, all too old to have children or accept a new idea.

While waiting for "youth from radium," the wise man will oxidize himself with deep breathing, open windows, and exposure of his body to the sun's rays.

Rejuvenation by radium would be at least more welcome than the Voronoff method, via the glands of goats or monkeys. An old man, anxious to revive energy that will let him continue playing the fool, is a sad sight.

MCDONALD, having put his country's interest ahead of his labor party's desire for a big dose "even if Britain has not the money," is asked to resign his seat in parliament by his labor constituency. He will probably obey the order, and since no man can be prime minister unless he sits in parliament, MacDonald will doubtless be made a peer and take his seat in the house of lords.

In the event, he will have run an interesting course, coal miner, labor politician, prime minister and peer of the realm.

MCDONALD FLIES TO NEW DUTIES

Task of Solving Nation's Financial Crisis Faces Prime Minister

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald flew down from Lossiemouth today to take up the task of his new national government where he left off Friday.

Reiterating his pledge to steer the emergency cabinet through the financial crisis, he made it clear that he has no intention of submitting to the demand of his constituents in Seaham harbor that he resign from the house of commons.

"I am going to see it through," he said, "there is no time for delay and I do not intend that any time should be wasted."

His pilot brought him from Lossiemouth to the Hendon air-drome in ten minutes less than the usual time for the run and the prime minister went immediately to his office for a cabinet.

"EVERYTHING'S ROSIE"
At The Grand
"Everything's Rosie" is the attraction today at the Grand Theater. Featuring Robert Woolsey in his first starring comedy, the picture catches the laugh-provoking highlights of a carnival faker's career and takes him through a series of comedy situations.

As the faker who sells "Dreko" which cures everything from love to rheumatism; as the petty crook with the great heart who adopts a helpless, abused waif and raises her to a creature of grace and beauty; as the auctioneer who sells "Big Bens" for "27 Jewel Swiss Movements," Woolsey spills wise-cracks with more than his accustomed speed, yet finds opportunity to give some excellent sympathetic acting that lends a depth of pathos to the production.

Anita Louise, John Darrow, Florence Roberts and Alfred P. James are in the cast.

"TRANSATLANTIC"
At The State

"Transatlantic," new production featuring Edmund Lowe and Lois Moran is the State theater's offering today.

It gives the public a chance to travel the ocean in de luxe style, as a passenger aboard a luxurious liner, and at the same time enjoy a romantic comedy drama, replete with thrills and laughs.

The story, briefly, deals with a group of passengers aboard an ocean greyhound, strangely thrown together during a passage between America and Europe. The principal characters include a Robin Hood of the half-world, played by Edmund Lowe; an old German-American lens grinder, Jean Hersholt, going abroad for his first pleasure trip with his beautiful young daughter, enacted by Lois Moran. Also aboard is a banker, escaping with several millions of his personal fortune before his bank collapses, and his wife, played respectively by John Halliday and Myrna Loy; a Swedish dancer, Greta Nissen, who is more than a platonic friend of the banker; and a crooked gambler, ready to commit any sort of a crime for money, portrayed by Earle Foxe.

Prisoner Is Hurt In Escape Attempt

MANSFIELD, Aug. 31.—Lester Depner 19, Putnam county inmate at the State reformatory, had his right leg crushed last night under a freight train while attempting to escape.

Depner and Steve Nera, 23, of Akron, were among the 150 inmates who were watching a ball game Sunday evening inside a barbed wire enclosure. The two made a dash for liberty, scaled the fence and ran to a passing freight train near by. Nera managed to escape but Depner fell beneath the wheels. His right leg was crushed, necessitating amputation.

(By Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 31.—Police of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York today sought the killers of Mickey Duffy, South Jersey racketeer chief slain Saturday in Atlantic City.

He had set up trust funds totaling $400,000 for his wife. Released in $10,000 bail after arrest as a material witness, he was guarded by six gunmen in her Philadelphia mansion.

Duffy's henchmen were searching underworld hangouts for the killer. Both police and the gangsters held the theory that Duffy was slain by his own men as he slept.

Harry J. Green, Duffy's gambling manager, and James Richardson, ex-pugilist, were arrested at Berlin, N. J., on suspicion of having knowledge of the killing and were held under $150,000 bail.

Duffy had known for several weeks that he was "on the spot." Twice during the past six weeks he had been the target for bullets that missed.

THE DAY In Sports

1931 SEASON NEARS CLOSE IMPORTANT GAMES SLATED
HARDWARE AND MULLINS
CLASH

TWO MORE WEEKS, 14 days of mushballing and Salem fans will be able to concentrate their attention entirely on two nationally important athletic events, the opening of the fall football season and the play-off of the world series between the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals. The Salem Softball league is rapidly approaching the home stretch and still the matter of what team will win the second half championship is a subject for widespread discussion among the city with anyone of four aggregations concerned and a chance for the title.

Three teams, the Mullins Foremen's club, Salem Hardware and the Colonial Sandwich Shoppe, hold the edge in the titular foray with a fourth, the Salem China Co., battling valiantly for recognition as one of the contenders. The latter, however, is conceded only an outside chance with the race involving, at the most, the three leaders. The Foremen's club and Hardware are in contention and Hardware, still tied for first place with the Colonials a game behind, in second place.

Mullins and Hardware each play two games this week. The body-makers oppose the Community Service Station in Tuesday's second game and Friday play the Pottery at 5:45. The Hardware is billed to face the Cox Studios today and the United Cigars Wednesday. John Bova's Sandwich Shoppe aggregation, facing the Pottery Wednesday and the Kiwanis club Wednesday, must win both games to remain in the race. The Colonials enter the latter game as the underdog, the Kiwanians having taken three straight decisions from the Bova men.

The game that all fandom is awaiting is scheduled Monday, Sept. 7, when the two present pacemakers, Mullins and Hardware, clash in what will probably be the most important game of the second half. The Foremen have trimmed the Seadmen three straight times and look forward to another victory which, incidentally will in all probability clinch for them the championship.

The advent of shorter days has forced onto the league's schedule-makers the task of arranging a play-off of postponed and tie games and these, according to an announcement made by J. M. Kelley today, will be listed for the coming two Sundays. Managers being involved in re-plays must plan immediately for Sunday competition and assure appearance of a full team.

Sundays and Saturdays, are only days left for play-offs. Unless games are played off on these off-days the league will be extended until Thanksgiving day.

Because of Mullins' fine showing against the Kiwanis club last Friday, fans are conceding that team a heavy advantage over both the Colonials and the Hardware in the final stretch. Contributors to this column are still submitting all-star teams to oppose the Foremen in a play-off series and here's the latest, another anonymous selection:

INFIELD — George Morris, 1b, Joe Kelley, 2b, F. Scullion, 3b, M. Sartick ss.
OUTFIELD — Miller, lf, T. Seeds, mf, P. Sanders, rf, P. Schuller, rsc.
CATCH — M. Schuller.
PITCHERS — Early and Miller.

"Sevaken Lake? Why I never heard of the place!"
No? Neither did the majority of Salem residents but just the same there is a Sevaken lake and a real place it is. Located south of Damascus, on the Damascus-Valley rd, it's a miniature village with 30 cottages and more than 100 persons composing the population.

There are plenty of Salem people, including Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Whiteleather and family, Mrs. T. S. Layden and children, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Irey and son, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Callahan and daughters, and others residing at the lake, a place not so well known but a good spot to be in regardless.

Take a trip out to the place with one of the lake club members sometime and you'll be surprised. A beautiful artificial lake, good fishing, boating, bathing, a clubhouse with dancehall, baseball diamond and everything that makes for a good recreational resort.
It's private, and better off because of this privacy.

Expect New Marks

COLUMBUS, Aug. 31. — Horsemen expect at least one record to fall during the harness events at the Ohio State fair which opens tomorrow.

Predictions are rather free that the track record of 2:03 3/4, set by Ovelmo Lad on the opening day last year, will fall before the curtain is rung down next Friday. Ovelmo Lad, owned by J. C. Hutzell, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and driven by George Byrode, set the mark to shatter Counterpart's "Tincup" record of 2:04 3/4 made on the closing day of the 1929 meeting.

FOUR CHAMPIONS IN TOURNAMENT; VETERANS ENTER

Bobby Jones Absent from Colorful Competition At Beverly Hills

YOUTHFUL STARS TO OPPOSE OLD-TIMERS

Free-For-All Struggle Looms; No Favorite Picked from List

CHICAGO, Aug. 31. — The golf stampede of the year, perhaps of years, opened over the treacherous fairways of the Beverly Country club today at 141 welders of wood and iron began their rush for the national amateur championship.

With Bobby Jones out of the picture, the last of his four major titles surrendered without a shot, the fight had the complexion of a wide open free-for-all with at least half the field possessing a fine change to slip into the throne room of American amateur golf. Many veterans were back, but they were confronted with a large number of rising stars, many of whom never had to face the genius of a Jones.

A quartet of former champions, has returned while a fifth, Jesse Guilford of Boston, withdrew unexpectedly yesterday along with 11 others. The former kings of American amateur golf who were back on the firing line were Francis Quimet, who won the title back in 1914 before the world of golf ever heard of a Jones; Charles "Chick" Evans, a two-time holder, Max Marston, 1923, and Harrison "Jim-out" Johnston, who beat Jones out for the title in 1929 with a notable assist from Johnny Goodman of Omaha, one of the numerous favorites in the battle opening today.

The sudden withdrawal of the DeForest brothers, John and Alaric, reduced the British threat considerably.

60 CANDIDATES TO RETURN FOR ALABAMA TEAM

Southern League Champs Seek Replacements for 1930 Stars

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is one of a series of advance stories on the prospects of top-ranking college football teams.

(By United Press)
TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Aug. 31. — Coach Frank Thomas, now mentor of Alabama's "Crimson Tide," Southern Conference titleholders and claimants to the national title honors, will have about 60 men reporting for practice Sept. 7, although the entire first string, with the exception of "Hurry" Cain, signal calling fullback, will be missing.

Stars Graduate
The departures of such men as "Freddie" Sington, all-America and all-Southern tackle; "Foots" Clements, his giant running mate, and John Henry Suther, all-Southern nominee, have robbed the Tide of championship hopes.

The team will be built around Cain, lone returning regular. In addition to Cain, 12 other lettermen will be back, a crew of reserves that proved to be almost as good as the varsity last year and who played almost as much.

Captain Joe Sharpe, center, is in fine shape. Other lettermen counted on for starting this fall are alternate-captain Ben Smith, end; Hillman Holly, midget halfback; John Tucker, quarterback; Leon Long, halfback; Sanford and "Ears" Whitworth, guards; Newton Godfrey, a fine tackle; and Leslie and Jackson, two other tackles; Autrey Dotherow, end, and Ellis Houston, center and end.

Lose 15 Lettermen
There is no talk of another championship on the Alabama campus, which has known four Conference titles and three claims to national honors since Wallace Wade became mentor at Alabama in 1923.

But Alabama, despite the loss of 15 lettermen, may have one of the best teams in the South this year. Vanderbilt, to be played on Thanksgiving Day at Nashville, looms as the outstanding team at present and Alabama will be pointed for that fray.

Alabama faces a hard sectional schedule, meeting the majority of the contending teams in the Conference.

CLEVELAND INDIANS LOSE 2; DERRINGER SHUTS OUT PIRATES

Goose Goslin smashed six hits including a homer and two doubles, as the St. Louis Browns turned on the Cleveland Indians and swept a double header, 8 to 3, and 6 to 3.

Chicago Trims Tigers

The Chicago White Sox committed eight errors and their four pitchers allowed twelve bases on balls, but they defeated Detroit, 10 to 8, in twelve innings. The loss dropped the Tigers into a tie with the Sox for last place in the American.

When he shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates, 5 to 0, in the first game of a doubleheader yesterday, Paul Derringer, former Rochester ace fixed his record for the year at 15 victories and six defeats. His winning average is topped by only one regular, Jess Haines, also of the Cardinals. Taking part in 29 games, he has struck out 107 batters, including 10 Pirates who took three futile swings yesterday.

In setting the Pirates down yesterday, Derringer yielded only six hits, while his teammates romped on Remy Kremer and Bob Osborn for 14. Bill Hallahan made it unanimous for the day by beating the ### Buccaneers, 4 to 1 in the nightcap.

Collins Blanks Giants

While the two card twirlers set a hot pace, the distinction of giving the day's outstanding performance went to Phil Collins of the Phillies, who allowed only one hit in beating the New York Giants, 3 to 0, in the second game of a doubleheader. Francis Hogan's single in the second inning was the only blow off Collins. The Giants captured the first game, 8 to 2.

Lefty Ed Brandt chalked up his seventeenth victory as the Boston Braves humbled the Brooklyn Robins, 3 to 2, in the first half of a twin bill. Herman's home run in the ninth with O'Doul on base deprived Brandt of a shut out. The Robins came from behind to beat Tom Zachary in the nightcap, 4 to 3.

Reds Trim Cubs

The Cincinnati Reds fell upon Pat Malone for four runs in the eighth inning to square their series with the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 3. Red Lucas had only one bad inning, the eighth, in which the Cubs scored twice.

Twenty-two thousand Boston fans watched the Red Sox take a 14 to 4 plastering from the New York Yankees. Led by Lou Gehrig, who belted his thirty-seventh home run, a double and two singles, the Yanks collected 21 hits off four Sox curvers. Ben Chapman contributed a brace of home runs to the assault. Using a second string battery, the Athletics caught one of their infrequent beatings from the Washington Senators, 5 to 1.

Screens Instead of Doors

The swinging door, separating kitchen and dining-room, is not always the most efficient type. It should, of course, be equipped with a glass aperture so that those about to enter can be seen, and the sudden bump averted. Nevertheless, even with a glass of fair size, accidents are likely to happen if more than one person passes through the door during a meal.

Which is one of the reasons why a screen is coming to take the place of the swinging door in some houses. The screen may be a very handsome affair. Indeed, some of the modern artists are making a specialty of painted or carved screens, and they are as much an ornament in the dining-room as any other bit of furniture, tapestry or decoration.

Whether the screen shall be two, three, four or five panel depends wholly on the size of the dining-room. It must be to scale, and better a well-proportioned screen that blends with the room than a very ornate affair that predominates because of size.

Usually a three-paneled screen will be found convenient. This can be folded in such a way as to adequately screen the kitchen or pantry procedure, and when the meal is completed can be used to cover the hallway between kitchen and dining-room as completely as a door.

If the children's table is in the dining-room and they are served at the same time as the grown-ups, then a screen partly separating their table will be a helpful bar to infantile interruptions—those unnecessary ones so dear to inventive little brains.

Screens can be made to order so that their panels will be covered with the same paper or fabric as the walls, thus blending into the color scheme perfectly.

Housewife Plans Flight To Rome in Hillig Plane

Mrs. Geraldine Loffredo of Buffalo to Use Ship that Already Has Crossed Atlantic on Her Good-Will Hop to Italy

MRS. GERALDINE
LOFFREDO

• "LIBERTY" PLANE FOR HOP TO ROME •

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Aviation, taking all manner of people under its wide-spread wings, has enlisted the efforts of one of a particular class which is usually associated with duties of the home rather than with the risks of trans-Atlantic flying.

While numerous men and women fliers have deserted various roles in life to take up aviation in a manner which puts them on the front pages of the country, it remained for Mrs. Geraldine Gray Loffredo, of this city, to transfer her duties from those of a housewife to that of a daring ocean flier. It's quite a leap even in this rapidly moving age.

But Mrs. Loffredo is used to leaps. They began in 1914 when she started her air career by making parachute jumps from hot air balloons at country fairs. In 1917, she made her first 'chute jump from a plane and, in 1922 in Rome, she made 76 jumps in competition, using a parachute of her own design.

Mrs. Loffredo, comely matron of Buffalo, is not of the usual type of woman flier of the era, however. Her name has not been as prominently screamed across headlines as others of her sex, for she has been tending to her duties as a housewife. But, as a flier of long experience, she surpasses most of the present-day women pilots of the world in knowledge of their element—the air.

True, too, Mrs. Loffredo differs from other air-minded women in that she realizes the limitations of her sex. Preparing daily to fly the Atlantic from America to Italy as a good-will gesture between the two nations, she has no illusions about what she considers the poor chance of a woman to fly the hazardous route all alone. This courageous housewife is no less brave in planning her difficult feat when she includes a co-pilot in the person of Renato Donati, Italian war ace and expert navigator, to accompany her. That's foresight, Mrs. Loffredo believes, and it probably will have considerable to do with the success of her oceanic attempt.

This woman, who steps from the quiet role of a home-maker to a trans-Atlantic flier, after tasting the thrills of aviation in earlier years, purchased the plane, Liberty, in which Otto Hillig, the "Flying Photographer," and Holger Holtriss, his pilot, flew from New York to Copenhagen, in which to make her gallant attempt to cement good-will between Italy and the United States. As a coincidence, her husband is a photographer of Buffalo. The monoplane, shipped back from Denmark, to Old Orchard, Maine, Mrs. Loffredo's proposed starting point, has been reassembled and is approaching readiness for the long flight which only one flier has been able to complete satisfactorily. Roger Williams did it with Lewis Yancey, as navigator, in July, 1929.

Mrs. Loffredo's aerial craft was paid for by money raised by Italian-American subscriptions from all over the country and she has expressed her hopes that the flight will prove successful in these words. "A great many Italian-Americans trust that this flight will mean even more cordial relations between Italy and the U. S. To me this attempt means a double opportunity—the chance to perform a great service by dramatizing the friendship between the two nations and the chance to fulfill a life-long ambition."

From parachute jumping, Mrs. Loffredo turned to actual piloting when in 1925 she was granted her license by the Government. She was the sixth woman in America to win such a coveted honor and, since that time, has been flying steadily, piling up hour after hour in the air, and becoming more and more adept at the controls. Expert as she is, however, she has the ability to reason, with soundness, that there is just that much better chance of success if a co-pilot and expert navigator is taken along.

Mrs. Loffredo will take off on her great adventure, the climax, as it were, of a long aerial career, with the best wishes of a world of housewives back of her. It is so rare that one of their number is singled out for world renown, although they all are worthy, that Mrs. Loffredo's success will be their success—and a most unusual accomplishment for the whole world to cheer.

She's Going to Swim Channel Again

SWIMMING CHANNEL IN 1926

Who doesn't remember that day in August, 1926, when Gertrude Ederle conquered the English Channel—the first woman to accomplish that feat? And when she came back to receive the acclaim of her country—what a celebration and outpouring of pride in Trudie! Miss Ederle, now teaching swimming in a New York pool, has the ambition to swim the treacherous channel again, this time from England to France. If her ambition is realized, she will have conquered it both ways. Trudie is shown (upper right) enjoying a swim, teaching her niece to swim (lower left), and Miss Ederle, herself (upper left). Go to it, Trudie, good luck!

PETERSTOWN, W. Va. — The apple crop is so heavy in sections of Monroe county, W. Va., that a number of orchardists have men picking the apples and throwing them away to protect the trees from excessive weight. Fifteen men are being employed in this work in an orchard near Peterstown.

Aboard Airliner Eastern Air Transport

“Dear Peggy

I'm almost too excited to write, and there's so much to see, both inside the plane and out. We've left Washington behind now, and I've just had a Chesterfield in the smoking compartment—they serve them on every ship.

“Among the eighteen passengers there's a senator and a foreign diplomat, and I'm surprised at the number of women. The trip is two hundred miles and the meter in the cabin reads two miles a minute; think of that.

“For me, the Chesterfields were the nicest touch of all. I was just dying for a smoke, and when the hostess passed them (and my favorite cigarette at that) everyone else seemed as tickled as I was. And my—they did taste good!

Chesterfields are served in the smoking compartments of all these planes—the largest and most luxurious in the East. With the fast growth of air travel, Chesterfield makes many new friends each day, here as in city streets and country homes—wherever good taste counts.

A mild cigarette—delightfully mild and smooth—with a tobacco fragrance all its own.

Whether you're air-minded or not, you'll always find Chesterfield on the air-line to taste—the quickest way to get there. They Satisfy!
